MORGAN ROUSSEAU, MANAGING EDITOR

New Yorkers and the people who love them watched in horror yesterday as a terrorist unleashed a deadly attack in Lower Manhattan. Eight people were killed and at least 11 injured when a man intentionally drove a truck into cyclists, pedestrians and a school bus. The suspect was shot by police, but is alive and in custody at a New York City hospital. Visit metro.us for continued coverage of this heinous attack and its aftermath.

TECH SECTOR HEARING ON 2016 ELECTION

1 Lawyers from Facebook Inc., Twitter Inc. and Alphabet Inc.'s Google head before U.S. lawmakers on Tuesday for two days of hearings on how Russia allegedly used their services to try to sway the 2016 U.S. elections. The U.S. Senate's crime subcommittee will be the first of three congressional committees to hold hearings on Russia. Its hearing is set for 2:30 p.m. EDT. At stake for the Silicon Valley companies are their public images and the threat of tougher advertising regulations in the United States, where the technology sector has grown accustomed to light treatment from the government. U.S. Sen. Mark Warner, vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, told reporters on Tuesday he is waiting on the companies to explain how they were misused.

ALLEGED GENERIC DRUG PRICE-FIXING COLLUSION

2 A large group of U.S. states accused key players in the generic drug industry of a broad price-fixing conspiracy, moving on Tuesday to widen an earlier lawsuit to add many more drugmakers and medicines in an action that sent some company shares tumbling. The lawsuit, brought by the attorneys general of 45 states and the District of Columbia, accused 18 companies and subsidiaries and named 15 medicines. It also targeted two individual executives: Rajiv Malik, president and executive director of Mylan NV, and Satish Mehta, CEO and managing director of India's Emcure Pharmaceuticals. Shares of Pennsylvania-based Mylan, also named as a defendant, fell more than 6 percent after the news. The states said the drugmakers and executives conspired to fix prices and split up the market for generic drugs.

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

8 KILLED IN TERROR ATTACK

3 Eight people were killed and at least 11 others injured after a vehicular strike terror attack in New York City on Tuesday afternoon, police said. A male suspect was shot by police and is in custody at Bellevue Hospital. The suspect drove a white Home Depot pickup truck onto a West Side bike path, leaving a path of injured people in its wake. There were no other suspects at large, police said.

PANEL SET TO RECOMMEND SOLAR TRADE TARIFFS

4 Federal trade officials will recommend measures to safeguard struggling domestic solar panel manufacturers against cheap imports in a closely watched case that could have a major impact on the price of U.S. solar power. The vote by the U.S. International Trade Commission is a major milestone in a case that has divided the solar industry for the last six months. The panel's proposals, which could include tariffs, a quota or other trade remedies, will be delivered to President Trump. Trade remedies were requested earlier this year by two small U.S. manufacturers that say they are not able to compete with cheap panels made overseas. But fears of steep tariffs on imports have sparked widespread nervousness among solar developers and installers that have benefited from a 70 percent drop in the cost of solar since 2010.

SUSPECT ARRESTED IN UTAH COLLEGE KILLING

5 A 24-year-old man accused of killing a student from China at the University of Utah and suspected in a second homicide in Colorado was arrested in Salt Lake City after a massive police search. Austin Boutain was taken into custody without incident at a public library in the city's downtown, said Det. Keith Horrocks of the Salt Lake City Police Department. Police said Boutain and his wife, Kathleen Boutain, 23, were also wanted for a homicide committed last week in Golden, Colorado. The victim of Monday night's shooting was identified as ChenWei Guo, who was parked near Red Butte Canyon when he was shot dead during what investigators believe was a failed carjacking attempt. Kathleen Boutain was being treated for minor injuries and held in jail on unrelated charges, following her arrest on Monday night.

POWER OUTAGE

Restoring power across Mass. may take 'several days,' Baker says

More than 200,000 Bay State residents were expected to be without power into Tuesday, and full restoration of electricity could take days, according to Gov. Charlie Baker, who said lingering winds made it difficult to recover from the powerful storm that ripped through the state overnight.

Strong winds and whipping rain that came with the fast moving storm knocked down trees, branches and power lines across the state overnight Sunday into Monday. The storm snarled the morning commute for many and caused commuter rail delays and school cancellations.

"The big issue we have right now is the wind, for all intents and purposes, really didn't die down very much today in a lot of places, which made it very difficult for crews to actually do a bunch of the work that's required to get people back up so it's likely that this is going to take several days," Baker told reporters Monday afternoon.

The governor and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency said northeastern, southeastern and central Massachusetts were hardest hit and could take the longest before power is restored. MEMA said communities in western Massachusetts served by Eversource could be fully restored Monday night.

Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito participated on a conference call Monday afternoon with emergency management and municipal officials to get feedback on restoration efforts, and Baker said the goal was to clear the debris and work "as quickly as we possibly can to get people back on line."

Eversource told the state it could take 48 hours before all customers are brought back up, while National Grid said it could need 72 hours to reconnect all customers. STATE HOUSE NEWS SERVICE

It's Metro Magic time! Our annual toy drive starts today

Metro makes it easy to donate with quick links to toy wish lists at Metro.us.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan@metro.us

As we enter the season of giving, Metro asks that you donate to the Metro Magic annual holiday toy drive during the 2017 season to help underprivileged children in your community.

This year marks the eighth anniversary of the toy drive, which was renamed in memory of Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-serving editor in chief. Mr. Metcalf oversaw the project for more than four years before passing away in 2013.

Mr. Metcalf lit up every year as he saw the faces of children unwrap their holiday gifts, and it's our goal to keep that magic alive.

"Tony felt we should use the size and scale of Metro to help others, and he used enormous dedication and force to execute the project and every year make children in need a little happier during the holiday season," said Metro CEO Yggers Mortensen. "I am proud to continue this project in honor of Tony, and I hope all our readers, suppliers and members of the Metro team will help to make this yet another great Metro Magic year."

Metro has created a wish list that readers can access by going to the links listed at Metro.us. Gifts range from under $5 and up.

Toys are delivered to our Metro offices in New York, Boston and Philadelphia through the months of November and December, then distributed to local charities that serve underprivileged children in those cities.

If you wish to donate you can choose the toys, pay online using a secure payment system, and your gifts, along with your name attached, will be automatically delivered to Metro's offices in each city.

Through the rest of November and much of December, both in print and online at metro.us, we will be reminding readers to donate.

Metro thanks readers in advance for remembering the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have presents to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a little one's holiday season.

A-Rod won over J.Lo with a sext

What a beautiful, thirsty pair.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Jennifer Lopez and Alex Rodriguez are still together. And now, J to the L-O is admitting that the thing that really brought them together wasn't a cobb salad, but a sext.

Apparently, Rodriguez wasn't even sure if the late-night rendezvous they were having were dates. That Rodriguez isn't the brightest, sometimes, is he? "Maybe we were seeing each other at night because of her work schedule." OK, my dude.

Then, on one special night, Rodriguez decided to up his game. "She told me around the third or fourth inning that she was single," he says. "I had to get up and go readjust my thoughts. I went to the bathroom and got enough courage to send her a text."

That text? It said, "You look sexy AF." Rodriguez is a regular Rainer Maria Rilke, y'all! "And then it took a turn," Lopez admits. Oh, dear.

Bette Midler does not approve

This lady is a national treasure.

Bette Midler, as you may know, is a national treasure. So when she predicts that the "Hocus Pocus" remake will be cheap, you nod your head and say, "Yeah, actually, it will be."

At Midler's annual Hulaween bash — benefiting the New York Restoration project, which Midler founded in 1995 — the "Hello Dolly" star had nothing but not-so-kind words to say about the reboot, which is now in production.

"I know it's cheap. It's gonna be cheap. … I'm not sure what they're doing to do with my character," she said, according to Vanity Fair. "My character is very, very broad, and I don't know who they're going to find to play that."

That's right, Midler. Nothing compares 2 u.

Can't blame her.

Don't blame the Biebs

Monday afternoon, news broke that Selena Gomez and The Weeknd had broken up after a mere 10 PDA-filled months together. Just a day before, Gomez was spotted hanging out with ex-boyfriend Justin Bieber. Is it a conspiracy, or a love triangle that nobody asked for!?

We're going to go with the former. Sources insisted to People that distance played a role in Gomez's split from The Weeknd. But then again, an unnamed source for the "Hands to Myself" singer's family told TMZ that Bieber is the worst, saying "Justin is a vile human and will never be accepted by us." Zamn, zaddy!

Meanwhile, Us Weekly thinks that Gomez is considering giving Bieber a 137th chance, with a source describing the situation as a "heartstring type of thing," whatever the eff that means.

So, obviously this whole thing is undeniably a hot mess and we'll keep hearing about it until, hmm, the end of time, maybe?

Lucky us.

Ughhhhhhhhhhh.

'Arrow' star Rick Gonzalez on why Barack Obama is a superhero

"He is the ultimate hero."

MATT JUUL
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

"Arrow" airs Thursdays at 9 p.m. on the CW. WARNER BROS./CW

Rick Gonzalez GETTY IMAGES

If you look up to the sky, you may see a bird or a plane, but you definitely won't see Superman.

Despite Hollywood's obsession with all things superheroes, caped crusaders and men of steel remain pure works of fiction, unless you happen to walk into a comic-book convention. Supervillains, on the other hand, are quite real. Lex Luthor and the Legion of Doom look like schoolyard bullies compared to all the heinous acts committed by iron-fisted dictators, maniacal billionaires and shadowy military forces over the decades.

While super-powered vigilantes aren't taking to the streets, that doesn't mean the world is devoid of beacons of hope. For "Arrow" star Rick Gonzalez, world leaders and even everyday people can be heroes, especially those who've overcome an immense amount of adversity in their lives.

The actor tells Metro that he thinks of Barack Obama as a superhero because of the way he lead the nation in the face of opposition.

"He is the ultimate hero," Gonzalez says. "The dignity, strength and ability to run the country the way he did for eight years, and the ability to become president prior to that, understanding that no one in Capitol Hill wanted to see a black man president ... that, to me, is a real-world superhero."

Although the Justice League can save the day only on the big screen, the world of comic-book heroes can affect society in other ways, inspiring fans to see the best in themselves and others. According to Gonzalez, who plays the vigilante Wild Dog, they can also speak truth to power by giving creators a platform to tackle serious issues.

"If we're going to do a comic-book TV show, then we still can't be afraid to touch the layer of truth that's happening in our world and even go to the past and revisit some of those ugly moments that we might not be comfortable speaking about," Gonzalez says. "We can use art to open up a discussion, heal, help and just have a dialogue."

It comes as no surprise then that "Arrow" and its sister superhero programs will soon face an enemy that's apparently resurfaced in the real world in their crossover episodes. Supergirl, Green Arrow, Flash, Wild Dog and the rest of the gang will take on Nazi dopplegangers from another universe, which wouldn't seem like such a timely conflict if it weren't for the surge of neo-Nazism in 2017.

The Brooklyn native believes that the television event is extremely relevant and mirrors the struggles happening today.

"There's so many different factions trying to impart their ideals onto others, and there's no inclusion happening," Gonzalez says. "That's the general idea when we're talking about superheroes and supervillains, two sides trying to fight for their ideals. Ultimately, we're taking that idea and pushing it to the boundaries."

3 Easy fall decorating ideas

These autumnal DIYs are so simple, you might actually do them.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Put your skeletons back in the closet and take down the cobwebs, because spooky time is over, and now it's decorative-gourd season, motherf@&#-rs. Sure, go ahead and buy out all the squash and pumpkins at Trader Joe's and plop them atop every surface in your house. Or, if you don't want to go over-gourd, but you're still into, like, leaves and acorns and other autumnal accoutrements, behold these easy DIY projects that will infuse just the right amount of basic fall-dom into your home.

Leaf garland

In the city, fallen leaves get trampled and dirty pretty quickly. But if you're off on a daytrip peeping some fall foliage, bring some back with you and create a leaf garland. If you can't find any decent leaves, you can totally buy packs of fake maple leaves on Amazon — which seems depressing, although they're definitely more sturdy (and reusable). Once you've obtained your leaves, you'll want to string them together. The easiest way to do this is with a needle and thread (you'll want to use fairly thick string and a large needle), making one stitch in the bottom center of each leaf. Then you can hang the garland over your doorway, drape across your fireplace mantle if you have one of those, place it as a kitchen table runner, and more!

INSTAGRAM/@ LITTLETEAWAGON

Painted acorns

This is a fun one because you get to do your best squirrel impression and go collect a bunch of acorns. Soak the little nuggets in a bowl of water to get the dirt off. Then, grab some acrylic paint (or, how about old nail polish you never use?) in whichever colors you fancy and using brushes from your local craft store, apply. Display the colorful goodies in a mason jar, bowl, clear vase, etc. This is an incredibly easy and soothing craft project, great to do with kiddos or just while you're bored watching a Netflix show you don't like all that much.

INSTAGRAM/@ SHOPJELLYBEANS

Pinecones as dinner-party decor

Last but not least, there's a lot you can do with pinecones, our favorite conifer collectibles. These are great because they stand up all on their own and look pretty elegant. Spray paint them in metallic colors for a festive centerpiece, or do just the tips, painting them ombre-style. They also work great as place-card holders for a dinner party.

Trade deadline moves show Pats are going all in on old-man Brady

What the Patriots didn't do is just as important as what they did do ahead of Tuesday's NFL trade deadline.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

In the end, the Patriots chose old over new.

The championship experience of Tom Brady and the chance to win one, two or maybe even three more Super Bowls during Brady's everlasting playing career won out over any championship potential of Jimmy Garoppolo.

For the second straight season at the NFL trade deadline, the Patriots traded away a top young talent for a future draft pick. Last year it was linebacker Jamie Collins, and this year it was Garoppolo.

Belichick was quite forthcoming for once while discussing Garoppolo on Tuesday. It truly felt like at one point in the past few months the Patriots head coach truly thought that the man they picked in the second round of the 2014 NFL Draft could have been Brady's successor. But with Brady still playing so well at age 40 and with the Pats needing to pay Garoppolo his market value next year, it would have made little financial sense for the team to have $40 million tied up at one position. One QB had to go, and the Patriots signaled that they're ready to ride it out with the five-time Super Bowl-winning Brady.

"It's a very complex situation on multiple levels," Belichick said. "This is really the last window that we had and we did what we felt was best for the team. There were many things involved in this whole process on a number of levels.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for Jimmy," he continued. "I couldn't ask for him to give any more than what he's given us. The Niners are getting a good player. They're getting a good person, and they're getting a great teammate and they're getting a good quarterback. And Jimmy's getting a great coach [in 49ers head coach Kyle Shanahan]."

On a busy deadline day, the Pats still made the biggest headline. GETTY IMAGES

Make no mistake, the Garoppolo trade is a risky one for the Patriots, both short-term and long-term. They still don't have a backup quarterback for the 40-year-old Brady, although the leading candidates are two former 49ers QBs in Brian Hoyer and Colin Kaepernick. The Pats are expected to sign one or the other by the end of this week.

Long-term, if Brady were to sustain a career-ending injury in the next year or so, Belichick would have egg on his face — especially if Garoppolo turns out to be good or great in San Francisco.

The good news for Patriots fans is that the higher-ups in the Patriots organization think their championship window can still be open with Brady for the next three, four or five years. That's what they said with this move.

The bad news is that the Patriots did absolutely nothing at the deadline to make themselves better this year. And anyone who's watched the Pats this season knows that this is a team that needs help if it is to compete for a Super Bowl this winter.

Aries You'll feel anxious if someone doesn't pull his or her weight. Don't overreact to an issue that needs to be addressed calmly. Yelling will not solve the problem.

Taurus Someone you do business with or work alongside will pose a problem for you. Don't share information that you don't want spread around. Play it safe.

Gemini If you contribute to your community or a cause, you will reap the rewards. Take on a physical challenge with gusto to stand out as the person most likely to achieve.

Cancer Refuse to let partners push or pressure you. Emotional matters are best dealt with civilly. Refuse to let your personal problems disrupt your work.

Leo Experience what's going on in your community. Knowledge and understanding will be key to fixing what isn't going your way. Change begins within.

Virgo Check into moneymaking opportunities. Your unique input will help you gain respect and allow you more leverage to do your own thing.

Libra Show how passionate you can be about whatever job or responsibility you are given. Your enthusiasm will put you in a good position when an interesting opportunity arises.

Scorpio Don't take on more than you can handle. It's important to stick to the path that will bring you the highest rewards. It's OK to be selfish once in a while.

Sagittarius Press on and get things done. The personal or business changes you make will affect your relationships as well as your lifestyle.

Capricorn Stick to basics and keep things running smoothly. Getting together with someone who could disrupt your current personal situation isn't worth it.

Aquarius Money matters can aggravate a situation if you or someone else doesn't handle joint funds properly or if you are overcharged.

Pisces Stay calm, no matter what. Reject anyone using emotional manipulation or persuasive tactics in an attempt to separate you from your hard-earned cash. EUGENIA LAST
